Summer 2024

A Recycling Success Story: The Butter House

Many businesses here on the Peninsula have a vested interest in protecting the Earth and have implemented practices to “green” their business, including recycling and organics recycling. In the city of Seaside, The Butter House, an incredibly popular breakfast spot, proves no matter how busy you are, there's always time to be green.

The Butter House, which is owned and operated by Susan and Benny Mosqueda, have been composting their food scraps since 2019. According to Susan Mosqueda, “Becoming an eco-friendly establishment has brought several benefits. It has allowed us to reduce our impact on the ecosystem while creating sustainable use of organics.” Additionally, they have observed a significant reduction in their monthly waste bill. This is because recycling and organic services are much cheaper than trash services.

"At first," says Susan, "some staff thought it would take more time to separate the waste but after implementation, it was observed to take the same amount of time to clear plates." The Butter House is an excellent example of how choosing more environmentally sound business practices is mutually beneficial for the planet and your business.

No Plastic Bags in Recycling or Organics

RECYCLING:

Reduce waste and recycle without bagging in plastic; place recyclable items straight into your recycling container loose, dry, and empty. Why? Plastic bags are wasteful and can jam up the sorting machinery at the Recycling Center.

ORGANICS:

Keep food scraps and plant trimmings loose. Why? Organics are turned into compost and put back into the soil. If you wouldn't want your food grown in it, keep it out of the organics container.

Feed the Soil with Keith Day's Compost!

Transform your landscape with Keith Day's Landscaping Supply. Their premium compost and all-natural forest mulch can enhance your outdoor spaces. Made from organic materials, the nutrient-rich compost promotes healthy plant growth. The local-sourced forest mulch adds natural beauty to your surroundings.
